The Human Rights Commission of the Maldives received training on Investigative Skills on Human Rights Criminal Violations by the US Department of Justice and the US Federal Bureau of Investigation

The Commission facilitated a training to its investigators on 'Investigative Skills on Human Rights Criminal Violations' today. The training sessions were conducted by experts from the US Department of Justice and US Federal Bureau of Investigations. The trainings developed capacity of investigators on the best practices on human rights investigations including data collation, interviewing and multidimensional triangulation, leading to effective persecution.

This training was part of the ongoing bilateral cooperation between the Commission and the US Department of Justice, to strengthen the institutional capacity of the Commission, and facilitate exchange of knowledge and experience in the areas of civil and criminal investigations.
